

Founded by five physicians in Detroit in 1819, with the mission “to elevate professional medical education and to cultivate the advancement of medical science,” the society moved to its Lansing headquarters in 1961. Today, the Michigan State Medical Society is the voice of more than 15,000 physicians in Michigan, giving them the resources and clout they need to remain leaders of the health care team and advocates for their patients.

“It was a pleasure working with DBI. They listened and understood our objectives and brought wonderful collaborative solutions to the table. The furniture feels like it belongs in the space and the ability to change and adapt, as needed, accommodates a variety of workstyles and needs. We couldn’t be happier.”

Jennifer Finney, Michigan State Medical Society

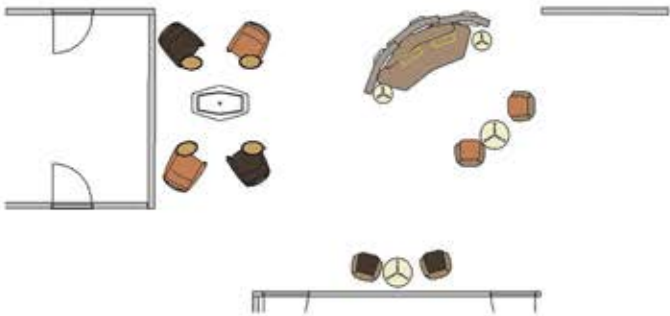

PROJECT OVERVIEW

OBJECTIVE: Working within a budget and in keeping with the building’s historical context, create a collaborative space - adaptable for large or small group meetings, social gatherings or individual work areas.

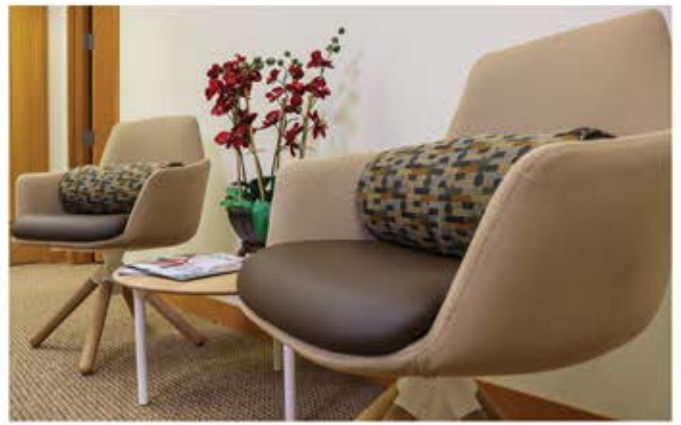

OUTCOME: Honoring the architect’s vision (the building was designed by esteemed architect, Minoru Yamasaki, who also designed the World Trade Center), DBI designed and furnished a collaborative space focusing on flexibility, innovation and flair.
